Received PhD in Philosophy in 2010.

1994-2004: Director of the Karev Program for Educational Involvement, Tiberias, under the auspices of Charles Bronfman and in cooperation with the Ministry of Education. The job involved responsibility for the pedagogical development and supervision of educational programs in approximately 25 schools, to bring about change in the municipality and school system using a holistic approach; setting up teams to promote dialogue between the local authority, parents, school administration, teachers, students, Ministry of Education and other bodies involved in the educational process. The job also included supervising the establishment of new courses of study in high schools, accelerating processes to advance schools toward Experimental School status, unique projects in accordance with individual school goals, urban youth magazine, setting up an urban radio station, and more.

1987-1992: Director of the Hedva Eibschitz Institute for Holocaust Studies, Haifa. I was one of the founders of the Institute and was responsible for policymaking. As director, I created and implemented curricula for approximately 1,000 students, who attended seminars at the institute during the academic year. I was responsible for:

- Organizing a variety of seminars for different population groups
- Documenting the testimonies of about 70 Holocaust survivors
- Organizing educational conferences for the wider public
- Establishing a library containing 3,000 books and a video library dealing with different topics related to the Holocaust
- Writing study programs
- Writing a guide for visitors to Jewish sites in Poland
- Preparing groups for visits to Poland
- Supervising research projects

1982-1988: History Teacher, Alon Junior High School, Nazareth Illit, and at the School for Gifted Children, Kfar Tavor, teaching Historical Thinking and Holocaust Research.

1980-1982: Zionist Council of Haifa, guiding groups and writing educational programs.

8. Scientific Areas of Specialization:

My particular specialization is the research of Jewish medicine during the interwar period and especially during the Holocaust. In the study of daily life in the Jewish ghettos under the Nazi regime, I combine multidisciplinary methodological aspects from scientific, organizational, and ethical fields.

I have written extensively about Jewish medicine in the Shavli Ghetto in Lithuania and in the Warsaw Ghetto in Poland, which was the largest of the ghettos. I examine the research topics in their broad historical context of developmental trends in the modern era, such as the secularization process, the development of the modern nation state, the development of public health and the impact of all these on the surrounding society and the Jewish world, in particular. In addition, I combine comparative research, such as examining Jewish medicine in the Holocaust versus other cases of genocide, the development of the historiography of Nazi medicine and of Jewish medicine.

9. Academic Activities:

2020-2023 - Head of a research team on: Medicine, Morbidity, and Childhood During and After the Holocaust: A Multidisciplinary Study of the Holocaust and Its Relevance to the 21st Century. The research has been awarded a grant from the Ministry of Science and Technology and has three subgroups, one headed by Prof. Shasha, one by Dr. Boaz Cohen, and one by Dr. Miriam Offer

2018-2020 - HBI AAC – Member of the Academic Advisory Committee at the Hadassah-Brandeis Institute. Research Associate – HBI

2018-2020 - I participate in a research group on Networks during the Holocaust. The group, which includes scholars in the field of Holocaust research in Poland, works through The Centre for Research on the Holocaust in Poland at the Yad Vashem International Institute for Holocaust Research, and is due to publish a book on different aspects of network activity in Poland. My focus is the medical networks that operated in the ghettos of the Generalgouvernement

10. Academic Profile:

The contribution of my research on Jewish medicine in the Shavli Ghetto in Lithuania was in accelerating the attention given to Jewish medicine in the Holocaust. The research exposed a rare and highly valuable document: the Diary of Dr. Aaron Pik. This research sheds light on various aspects of ghetto life including the issue of childbirth in the ghettos, as well as ethical difficulties facing the ghetto inmates following the German decrees against childbirth in the ghettos of Lithuania. This diary and the research findings have become an inseparable part of the texts studied in Holocaust research. My research on medicine in the Warsaw Ghetto is a continuation of my M.A. thesis. It is rich in varied archival sources, which examine daily life in the ghettos and the Jewish reaction patterns in the Holocaust as a unique, unprecedented case in the history of genocide. This is an interdisciplinary study, which has attracted great interest among medical professionals, historians, and the general public. [The manuscript is being published in Hebrew and English by Yad Vashem, with the support of grants and funds].

My article “Ethical Dilemmas in the Work of Doctors and Nurses in the Warsaw Ghetto” was published in English in the prestigious journal Polin: Studies in Polish Jewry and received a huge response. My two articles that were published in the English edition of Korot: The Israel Journal of the History of Medicine and Science of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem are pioneering in the historiography of Jewish medicine in the Holocaust.

My article on medicine in the Shavli Ghetto makes an important contribution to the field of medical ethics during the Holocaust and specifically to the coping of the medical staff in the ghettos and camps as Jewish victims.

A pioneering article that I wrote in collaboration about the history of urology in Eretz-Israel in the shadow of the Holocaust, which was published in Urology Under the Swastika, is already in demand for translation to other languages. The Israel Urology Association has ordered the article for dissemination to all urologists in Israel.

In recent years, some of my articles have been published on important academic platforms and as invited peer-reviewed book chapters. In addition, I am leading the process and co-editing several academic research collections of articles on medicine and the Holocaust, including two books and two journal issues that have been devoted to the topic. For details, please see the list of publications below.

My non-academic publications, based on my research, have also had a great impact. To bring just one example, I was invited to publish a long article in Galileo, Journal of Science and Thought, especially to mark the 70th anniversary of the Warsaw Ghetto. Although a non-refereed journal, it has a large readership, including many scholars. As the main article in this issue, it described some of the physicians’ and scientists’ activities inside the ghetto. Throughout the year, I am frequently invited to be interviewed on radio and television, especially in the run-up to Holocaust Memorial Day. In addition, I receive invitations to speak at leading physicians’ forums at major hospitals throughout Israel, to lecture to medical students, as well as in other leading forums. Material and information sent to me following these public channels serve as a catalyst for further research. Since 2019, I have been teaching a course on the history of medicine during the Holocaust at the Sackler Faculty of Medicine at Tel Aviv University. The course is a great success and the medical students show great interest.

Future plans

I have several articles for publication in advanced stages of preparation: The education system and research under extreme conditions, focusing on the case of the study of medicine and medical research in the ghettos; the Jewish reaction patterns in the Holocaust based on the form of the medical systems established by the Jews in the ghettos; writings of Jewish physicians before, during, and after the Holocaust, and Jewish women at the frontline of resistance in the ghettos.

I am also continuing to gather archival material on medicine in the Holocaust and am extending my knowledge and research. I have material for several directions of further study:

I intend to research the biographies of physicians who wrote diaries and/or documents before, during, or immediately after the Holocaust, and to develop this field of writing.

I am planning to write a book based on other diaries that I have discovered, about life in the Shavli Ghetto.

An article about the Jewish hospitals in other ghettos such as Kalish and in Breslaw.

A study comparing the Jewish medical activities during the Holocaust with those of the victims of other cases of genocide, and comparative studies on the Jewish medical systems in the various ghettos in the different areas under Nazi occupation.
